

Fiber optic patch cord cold splicing technology

Overview

Optical fiber cold splice technology is based on the use of mechanical connectors to join two fiber-optic cables. The connectors used in cold. Fiber optic joints or terminations are made two ways: 1) splices which create a permanent joint between the two fibers or 2) connectors that mate two fibers to create a temporary joint and/or connect the fiber to a piece of network gear. Either joining method must have three primary characteristics. Fiber optic networks provide high bandwidth, low attenuation, and minimal interference, but their performance heavily depends on proper splicing techniques and patch cord management. As data traffic grows exponentially, operators require precise deployment strategies for fiber optic cables. Fiber optic patch cords, also known as fiber optic patch cables or fiber jumpers, are indispensable components in modern optical networks. But what happens when you need to join two cables to extend a network or repair a break?

You can't just twist them together.
